ROAD BUDGET HEARING ON OCT. 25TH

Delegation Will Attend Highway Commission Meet To Support Proposals

El Dorado County Chamber of Commerce is arranging for a strong delegation to accompany its committee on highways to Sacramento on Friday, October 25th, to attend a meeting of the State Highway Commission.

At this meeting, at ten o'clock in the morning, the State Highway Commission will continue its hearing relative to formulating the new biennial budget and it is in support of work in this county which the Chamber hopes may be included in the new budget that the El Dorado County delegation is being arranged.

Members of the chamber's highway committee are John A. Raffetto, Jr., Roy G. Strum, F. Norman Celio and G. W. Melbye and the projects they will recommend for inclusion in the new biennial budget were endorsed some months ago by the general membership of the chamber.

Major projects to be urged upon the State Highway Commission for inclusion in the new budget include: Reconstruction and re-alignment on U. S. Route 50 between the top of Clarksville hill and a point approximately one mile west of El Dorado;

Reconstruction and re-alignment on U. S. 50 between Merryman's and the Five-Mile Terrace;

Reconstruction and re-alignment between the Fourteen-Mile House and Fresh Pond;

Improvement of the secondary state highway between Placerville and Kelsey; and, Improvement of State Highway 49.

The committee hopes that as large a number as possible of the membership of the chamber of commerce may be able to attend the meeting and notes that it is a duty of those who benefit most from the travel encouraged by highway development to place themselves well to the fore in the active support of the better roads movement.

Tennis Ladder Is Announced

Challenge Matches To Be The Order During Ensuing Few Weeks

The current El Dorado County High School tennis ladder has been posted by Tennis Coach Bob Ramsey. The listings are only tentative, and many changes are expected during the first few weeks of challenge matches.

Players wishing to go up the ladder may challenge anyone within three places above them. Challenge forms must be filled out and all challenges must be posted on the bulletin board in the upper hall. Those who do not accept challenges will forfeit their positions. Players not listed may get on the ladder by defeating the bottom player. The matches are to consist of the best two out of three sets.

The following is the tennis ladder including boy and girl players, up to October 16:

Wreck Victims Better, Physician States

The condition of David Kawel-macher and Neil Gardner, badly hurt in a Friday night auto wreck, showed continued improvement on Wednesday. It was reported by Placerville Sanatorium. Their attending physician said that the probability of internal injury had diminished and that barring unforeseen complications, their continued improvement might be expected.

Mrs. Thomas R. Schneider and daughter, Gerry Lee, returned on Wednesday from a visit with relatives at Chico.

U. S. Parachutists in Action

Soldiers of the Test Parachute Battalion (consisting of two officers and 48 men) drift earthward "behind the enemy lines" in a demonstration at Fort Benning, Ga., where they will form the nucleus of the 501st Parachute Battalion under command of Major William M. Miley.

COUGARS APPRECIATE TURFING OF BENNETT PARK FIELD

Coach Larry Brown Conveys Thanks Of Squad To Lions At Their Football Dinner Tuesday; Vern Landreth, Conference Official, Speaker

The thanks of the high school football squad to all of the agencies which contributed to the turfing project for the athletic field at Marcus P. Bennett, Jr., Memorial Park, were conveyed to Placerville Lions Tuesday night at their football dinner meeting at the Ivy Hotel.

Coach Larry Brown told the Lions how much the turfing field means to the game of football and how sincerely the improvement is appreciated by the Cougar athletes.

Brown spoke briefly of football prospects at the school this season and mentioned Sutter Creek and Sonora as two bad hurdles which the Cougars yet have to surmount. County Engineer Don M. Hoffman was called upon for a short talk and Past President Louis Armes reported on his visit Monday with the Lions at Carson City, who sent their greetings.

Lions were present from Jackson and Polson. Guests of the evening were Vern Landreth, Pacific Coast Conference football official, and Wilbur Adams, Sacramento sports writer, who were presented by entertainment chairman John A. Raffetto, Jr.

Mr. Landreth discussed the strength of various coast conference teams and paid special tribute to Coach "Stub" Allison, at California, whom he credited with developing team morale to a higher point, sustained through victory and defeat, "than any other coast conference coach that I know of." Adams spoke briefly.

"THE THIRD TERM ISSUE" TO BE DISCUSSED BY SENATOR JOHNSON

Senator Johnson will speak on "The Third Term Issue," over stations of the Columbia and Mutual networks.

This is according to word received by Homer P. Brown, chairman of the Republican County Central Committee.

Senator Johnson's address will be intensely interesting to the million and more voters of all parties who gave him their endorsement at the August primary election.

PLANS FOR WIDE EXTENSION OF GERMAN AIRLINES IN BRAZIL INDICATED

RIO DE JANEIRO (UP)—An agreement between the German-owned condor Airline and the Snapp—A Brazilian owned river navigation company—for the coordination and development of aerial and river transportation in the Amazon valley has caused concern in United States circles here. (New York interests believed the agreement may be the forerunner of a wide extension of German airline operations in South America.)

Supervisors Carl Niguel and Cy Heusner were in town Wednesday morning from their respective districts.

O. E. S. GRAND CHAPTER WILL CONCLUDE ON FRIDAY

SACRAMENTO (UP)—Delegates to the state convention of the Order of Eastern Star today elect officers of the California grand chapter.

A special session tomorrow night will honor the two highest officers of the general grand chapter of the United States, Mrs. Effie Easton and Charles H. Townsend of San Francisco, the Most Worthy Grand Matron and Most Worthy Grand Patron of the order.

SOVIETS WILL JEALOUSLY GUARD DARDANELLES, TURKEY REPORTS

ISTANBUL, Turkey, (UP)—Soviet Russia will refuse to tolerate Axis blows against the Dardanelles Straits or the near east, the Turkish newspaper Son-Posta said today.

Informed Turkish sources and the press agreed that the Russians may be prepared to acquiesce to German and Italian domination of the Balkans but asserted that the Soviets would spring to action the minute the Dardanelles are threatened.

The fire alarm Wednesday afternoon was occasioned by a grass fire on Pacific Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Clifton are spending the week on vacation. Their destination was not disclosed.

CONSCRIPTION LISTS 1,200 FOR COUNTY

Duty Of Registration Is Incumbent Upon Individual, Warning

Headquarters of the Selective Service Board for El Dorado County were established Wednesday at Room 1, Federal Building, in the basement of the new postoffice.

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—According to the Adjutant General's office, the opportunity for the enlistment of volunteers of draft age in the National Guard for the regular three-year enlistment continues open. It was understood that the regular Army halted voluntary one-year enlistments last night.

Registration for military service of all men of the county who have passed their twenty-first birthday but not their thirty-sixth opened at seven o'clock this morning in the forty-four election precinct polling places and was to continue until 9 o'clock tonight.

The county will list about 1,200 men in the age group, officials said, basing their estimate on the estimate that over the nation the registration will list about fourteen per cent of the population.

900,000 in State

SACRAMENTO (UP)—Young men of draft age in California today went to their polling places to register for the national selective service program, the greatest signpost for military service in peacetime history.

Required to register was every man over 21 years old and under 36. Principal exceptions were men already in military service or representatives of foreign governments.

Adjutant General A. E. Mittelstaedt, director of selective service for California, made a statewide radio appeal last night for cooperation from employers and draft eligibles to expedite the registration.

Registration posts will be open between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. The California registration act. (Continued on Page Three)

Engineer Takes Year's Leave

Captain Hoffman Has Been Recalled To Army From Reserve Status

Captain Don M. Hoffman, county engineer, has been granted a year's leave of absence by the Board of Supervisors, it was learned Wednesday morning.

It is understood that he will appoint a deputy who will serve in his stead during his absence.

That is about all that we are able to report authoritatively as of Wednesday, since Mr. Hoffman was in Lake Valley Wednesday morning and was not expected home before Wednesday night or Thursday.

Rumor has it, and it would appear that there is some ground to suspect that the report is true, that Captain Hoffman has been called to active duty from the United States Army Reserve.

SENIOR PLAY TICKETS MUST BE EXCHANGED FOR RESERVED SEATS

Those who have purchased tickets for the Senior play, "Mistakes at the Blakes," which will be given at the high school Auditorium Friday evening, November 8, should exchange their tickets at Fox Brothers' Pharmacy for reserved seat stubs.

The play management on Wednesday called attention to the need for reserving seats after the tickets have been obtained from members of the cast in the play and states that judging from the number of tickets being sold, it will be well to attend promptly to the matter of reserving seats.

Announcing preparation for the start of night rehearsals this week, Director Thomas Flynn reports that the cast is making excellent progress and that "Mistakes at the Blakes" promises to measure up to the excellent record which is the tradition of Senior plays at the high school.

"Fool Proof" Chrysanthemum

After five years of controlled fertilization, a "fool proof" chrysanthemum has been developed by University of Chicago botanists. It blooms two months earlier than customary and withstands sub-zero temperatures. Students Betty Jane Nelson and Gladys Garner are admiring plants which have been exposed to a 35-degrees-below-zero temperature and are nevertheless very much alive.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB PRESIDENT RESIGNS AT ANNUAL LUNCHEON

Mrs. John Nelson Succeeds Mrs. Don Hoffman, Whose Term Of Office Is Terminated By Plans For Removal From The Community

The main auditorium of the Shakespeare Club provided the setting for the annual luncheon held at the club house on Tuesday, October 15th.

Festive Autumn colorings were featured in the gaily decorated auditorium and the same color scheme was carried out in the dainty and artistic table settings where covers were laid for approximately eighty members and guests.

Mrs. Don Hoffman, president of the club, graciously presided and opened the program by requesting all present to unite with her in the Salute to the Flag. The assembly, led by the chorus, then sang "America the Beautiful" and "God Bless America."

Following the salad course Mrs. Leland Cook, in her pleasing soprano voice, rendered two selections, "Spirit Flower" and Stephen Foster's ever lovely, "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair."

At the conclusion of the luncheon Mrs. Hoffman introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Howard Fish, state chairman of drama, who chose as her reading a comedy in three acts, entitled "Life With Father."

SON OF PIONEER NATIVE PAYS VACATION VISIT ALONG MOTHER LODE

Among visitors in Placerville over the weekend, were Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Kiefer of Los Angeles. Mr. Kiefer is a past president of Ramona Parlor No. 109, N. S. G. W., Los Angeles. They visited Placerville to review scenes and memories of the pioneer grandfather and mother of Mr. Kiefer, who were well known in this community in the early fifties.

They report that Mr. Kiefer's grandfather, Mr. Barr, started the old Carey House and operated not only the Carey House, but the Ohio House and the Cedar Ravine Hotel at various times. His mother, he said, was born in the Carey House in 1856, and at 85 years old, is living in Los Angeles. She is the little girl who was rescued from the burning Carey House, by Matt Metzler, during the disastrous fire of 1856. Her family left shortly after that, and settled in Visalia, where Mr. Kiefer was born.

The Kiefers are taking a trip through the Mother Lode, and will spend some time at Lake Tahoe, then returning to Placerville and on to Los Angeles. Mr. Kiefer is at present manager of the Court Bond Department for Seyler-Day Company of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Eloise Thorne, who came up Monday from Sacramento on business matters, continued Wednesday to Lake Tahoe for an overnight visit with Mrs. L. A. Dunn and family, and expected to return to Sacramento on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Myers devoted Wednesday to a visit to Lake Tahoe.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tidd were among those in town Wednesday from the Springvale section.

ALL ENGLAND HAMMERED BY BOMBS

RAF Smashes At Germany's Sources Of Supply; Axis Drive On Suez Foreseen

LONDON, (UP)—German air fleets in increasing numbers battered at cities on almost all coasts of England, Scotland and Wales today during one of the heaviest and most widespread offensives of the war.

By JOE ALEX MORRIS, U. P. Foreign News Editor Germany's relentless, unceasing aerial offensive mounted so furiously today that the Axis powers seemed on the verge of attempting their long threatened knockout blows against the British Isles and key points of the British Empire.

London and many other cities in England shuddered but fought on under a hail of high explosives that Nazis said created "unparalleled chaos" and "a fiery hell" in the British capital. Berlin claimed, too, that the Royal Air Force was offering less and less opposition to the hundreds of Nazi squadrons attacking the enemy's defensive power and supply lines.

Dispatches from bomb splattered London confirmed that some of the most terrible raids of the war were in progress and indicated that the British took seriously the Nazi threats that much harder blows were yet to be struck. But British sources denied that the nation's ability to resist had been weakened and emphasized that Royal Air Force bombers were striking back strongly.

British bombers were reported to be hitting chiefly at the heart of the German military strength, seeking to destroy the oil supply of the Reich and thus to stall the Nazi aerial armada. The big naval base at Kiel, the Hamburg docks and similar German targets again were attacked heavily during the night, the London air ministry said.

The German aerial onslaught against Britain, however, seemed more than ever to be an immediate preliminary to a general offensive which the Axis powers reportedly have decided to launch in an effort to win the war by starting the disintegration of the British empire on many fronts.

Germans Report London Burning

Official Nazi Agency Says British Capital Is "Sea Of Flames"

BERLIN (UP)—German air fleets attacking Britain in mass formation started big fires in central London and turned the British capital into "a large sea of flames" that could be seen 60 miles away, the official news agency reported today.

"London is a large sea of flames," the agency reported. "German fliers observed the fires from a distance of 80 to 100 kilometers."

"North of Victoria docks (on the Thames river) five particularly large fires were burning, having destroyed an important warehouse."

"Large fires also broke out in the center of the city, northeast of the corner of the Thames Embow. Even with the most vigorous use of the London fire fighting forces it will be difficult to extinguish these fires."

During the night Nazis said, 1,000 German planes dropped 2,000 pounds of bombs on London in what they called reprisal raids for the alleged bombing of German civilians by the Royal Air Force.

First Aid Course Proposed At Smith Flat School

In response to requests from some who are interested, officials of the Smith Flat school are proposing to arrange for a Red Cross course in first aid instruction which will start as soon as enough prospective enrollment is obtained to indicate that the course would be worth the time of the instructor.

Anyone who would care to enroll in such a course is asked to notify the principal of the school, John W. Bean. It is stated that the expense of the course will not exceed $1 per enrollee, and that preliminary plans contemplate study one night and perhaps two nights of each week.

MARRIAGE MONEY

by JANE LITTELL

COPYRIGHT 1932 BY JANE LITTELL—DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Pike Arno, out of a job and not trying particularly hard to find one, is befriended by Leona Cheeny, a young New York stenographer. She is cautious about financial matters, and although Pike is urging her to marry him, she refuses until he gets a job or until her own meagre funds have been sufficiently supplemented. She overhears some girls at the office telling how they eke out their maintenance by acting as corespondents in divorce cases. Leona learns the name of one of the lawyers by whom they are employed, and summoning up all her courage, goes to his office for an interview.

If only she could earn a few hundred dollars for a "nest egg" she could then marry Pike.

Burgess, the lawyer, is doubtful whether this wide-eyed shabbily dressed girl could ever affect the worldly guile necessary in cases of this kind. Gradually, the youthful beauty of the girl dawns upon his consciousness and he envisions her properly garbed.

Outside the office she hears him discussing her merits with Chet Harknet, who is seeking the divorce. They agree that, in evening clothes of the mode, the girl would be beautiful enough to make any wife jealous.

Harknet engages her and tells her to report that evening to his hotel.

CHAPTER FOUR

"Who is Pike?" asked Chet. "My boy friend."

"The one you're doing this for? You must love him an awful lot."

"I suppose so," she said slowly. "He's my boy friend."

"And what does being your boy friend mean?" asked Chet.

"Why—somebody to be with every night, mostly. The fellow you are going to marry. Your boy friend," she repeated.

"And you're willing to be the corespondent in a divorce to get money to marry him?" wondered the man.

"Well, a girl's got to marry some time, and nobody else but Pike ever wanted to marry me," she answered quickly. "Maybe I'd never get another chance."

"Oh, yes, you would," he said wisely. "And if I were you I'd ditch that Coney Island Beau Brummel and take the thousand you're going to get for this and stage a little hunting party for a man worth marrying."

"Pike's a good, steady boy," she protested.

"Maybe so, but don't you like dining on Pietro's roof better than cooking pork chops at home?"

"Of course! But I'm only just visiting in your world. I have to go back to—to pork chops when it's over. So there's no use wanting what I can't have, is there? I'll have a grand time going places with you and seeing how rich people act. And I'll have to remember all my life."

The music stopped and they went to their table, but their dinner developed into quite a silent affair. Chet was picturing what Leona's life would be and wondering why it was that a girl like Leona—true and loyal and capable of any sacrifice—should fall to the lot of one Pike Arno, unemployed truck driver, while a faithless, fickle creature like Christine should fall to him.

And when they went back to his apartment to get their wraps and leave for the theater she called him to come and look in the mirror over her shoulder and see if she really was as sparkly and happy-looking as all that or if the mirror was tricking her.

"You're just about the loveliest thing I ever saw," he told her solemnly.

And when they went out of the hotel side by side she couldn't resist a sidelong glance of triumph at the bellboy who had been so snooty when he led her to the elevator. She looked to see if the doorman recognized her, too. But neither of them seemed to, and she was disappointed.

But she wasn't disappointed at the theater. They had the upper front box and when Leona walked in and stood staring down at the orchestra pit full of lovely ladies in evening dresses and handsome men in black and white it was like staring into a barrage of opera glasses. THEY looked at her, anyway, and for the first time in her shy young life Leona wanted to be looked at. She was lovely and she wanted all of Chet's world to see how lovely she was. She was just as pretty as any girl she could see and a better dressed than most of them.

She was almost sorry when the house grew dark and the curtain went up. It was such fun to be there right in the midst of all those rich people and not have any of them know that she was just a little stenographer, being paid for doing this. And then, when they were standing at the end of the first act, getting Leona's wrap on so she could go with Chet out onto the fire escape while he smoked, it happened.

A woman's voice, brittle, shrill with fury, came from somewhere over the bustle of the people going out.

"Madeline, will you look! There! In the upper left box! Chet couldn't come to my dinner party because he had to go out of town on business. Look! Jerry! Pat! Gertrude! Look! I want plenty of witnesses for this!"

Leona, with her white fur wrap slung over her shoulders like a cape, turned to look down at the woman who was causing the commotion. Chet came to stand beside her. And that woman in the flame-colored dress was pointing at them—at them!

Leona turned to look up at Chet's face. It was grim with repressed fury.

"That, Leona, is my wife. And I think we have been sufficiently conspicuous for one evening. Here. Get your arms into those sleeves and let's get out of here."

"And not see the rest of the show?" she asked like a disappointed child. Why couldn't they stay? This was exactly what Mr. Burgess was paying her money for.

"You paid good money for these tickets," she said anxiously; "why waste them?"

"Maybe you're right," said Chet, with a reluctant little smile of understanding. It would be a shame to snatch this child away from her first play at the end of the first act. "Maybe we'd better brazen it out. It will give Christine a chance to point us out to everyone she knows in the theater."

When they were out on the fire escape, he burst out.

"What makes me so sore is that I could divorce her, and not on trumped-up grounds, either. Instead of that, I've agreed to let her accuse me of marrying her for her money, and then spending it on other women, when as a matter of fact I tried to get her to live on what I earned—and this new hot lover of hers is an out and out fortune hunter."

Leona could only stare. So Chet worked! Then he wasn't rich after all! It was more like bewilderment than awe, she tried to comprehend. "She's always reminded me that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, because she couldn't make me a playboy who would live on her money. I used to think because she was born rich, she must be right. But I'll share a secret with you, Leona, that it took me a long time to learn. It isn't always money that makes the man—or woman, either. It's the way they were brought up. And I wasn't brought up to be a lap dog."

Funny, thought Leona. Here was Chet Harknet all unhappy about the same thing that made Pike unhappy. Only Chet wouldn't take Christine's money, and Pike was taking hers. And a man really shouldn't be sponging on a girl.

That was the first disloyal thought she had ever entertained about Pike, and she was ashamed of herself. But the thought persisted. In six months Pike ought to have found some sort of a job. Maybe he liked sponging.

At the end of the second act, they got out onto the fire escape before the lights came on, and at the end of the show they were the first people out of the theater.

"Well, that's that," said Chet with a sigh. "I'm thirsty. I think there's another bottle of that cider you like so well left over from happier days. How about it?"

"I am awfully thirsty," she admitted. "And I have to go to your place anyway to change clothes. Then I must hurry home. It'll be after one before I get to bed now."

They rode along in silence. Leona had so many things to think about that she didn't want to talk. The thing that had impressed her most was the great number of people who could afford beautiful clothes and theater tickets. And yet Chet said he worked. Maybe more of those people worked. She wondered what sort of work they did that they could earn so much money.

What Chet was thinking about was that it was a darned shame he had let Burgess talk him into letting a nice youngster like Leona in for a taste of Christine's venom. Christine hated him so these days that she wouldn't be able to resist humiliating him in every possible way. And Leona would come in for her share, too, inevitably. He shuddered to think of the climax of the affair when the actual raid was staged.

Chet stopped at the hotel desk on the way in, and the waiter with the bottle of "cider" Leona liked so well arrived at the door of Chet's apartment only a moment after they did.

"More luck," smiled Chet. "We'll need it."

"Both of us," said Leona, beginning to worry about what might be waiting for her when she got home. She had scarcely given Pike a thought all evening and it would be just like him to be waiting in her room to make her tell where she had been.

"Now run along and change and I'll drive you home," he said.

But when that bedroom door closed behind her she didn't hurry to get out of the ermine wrap and the velvet dress. There was that full-length mirror tempting her, and she posed and turned and twisted before it, first in the coat and then just in the low-backed dress.

She heard the telephone ring in the sitting room, too, and Chet's angry voice answering:

"Anything you want me to know you can say to my lawyer!" And then: "Indeed, you can't come up here, now or any other time. You'll be informed when anything is expected of you."

Poor Mr. Harknet! It was a shame he was having so much trouble when he was so nice. She hoped she and Pike never had any trouble after they were married. Pike certainly never would have the sort of trouble Chet Harknet was having. One man was enough for any woman. Pike would certainly be the only man in the world.

Slowly she peeled off the white velvet dress and the sheer stockings and the silver slippers. She liked those little tight-fitting silk mesh panties. She wondered if they made shirts and panties all in one piece of that snugly-fitting mesh and if maybe she couldn't afford one suit of it for her honeymoon.

She was standing there, clad in nothing but the little panties, when she heard voices outside—furious voices.

"You can't fool me!" cried the same brittle voice that had created such a turmoil in the theater. "I know she's here! She came up with you and she hasn't gone down. Anyway, you haven't been drinking out of both those glasses, have you?"

There was some low-voiced, urgent protest from Chet and then Christine went on, her voice higher and more hysterical:

"Oh, so this isn't the girl you want me to catch you with, eh? This is someone important, eh? Well, society girl or no society girl, you produce her decently clothed—or she'll serve as well as anyone."

And then the bedroom door was flung open, and Christine, her face contorted with hate and revenge, was standing there, sneering. Then she laughed.

For one paralyzed moment Leona stood there. Then she grabbed the nearest garment, and clutched it to her bosom in a vain attempt to hide her nakedness.

"So! You high class hussy! Didn't take you long to get your clothes off, did it? Well, if this won't get me a divorce, nothing will. Come on, you photographers. Get this. It's too good to miss."

She reached for the bundle of white fur that was Leona's only covering, and tried to snatch it away. Leona backed away—backed right into the range of that full-length mirror that showed her naked back to anyone who came near the doorway. And then Christine was flung out of the bedroom and Chet's big bulk blocked the door. He was white with fury, and his black eyes, blazing with rage, held those in the sitting room at bay, while his hand reached out and fumbled for the door knob.

Somehow, Leona managed to get that ermine coat about her, cape fashion, huddling it about her, and then she went to Chet and touched him.

"Let them," she whispered. "I don't mind. Honestly. They've seen me anyway. And then it will be over, and you won't have any more expense. And you'll only owe me for one evening instead of seven. Then you won't have to worry about it any more, either. You couldn't stand this all over again."

She was considering him. Trying to make it easy for him. He took time from all the other pressing things to smile down at her crookedly, gratefully.

She was sacrificing herself to do it, too. Sacrificing the money she said she needed so desperately, and those other evenings of playing in a world that was new and wonderful to her. Sacrificing herself for him. Imagine Christine doing a thing like that!

The Real Issue—Peace or War

"The real issue of this campaign . . . is peace or war . . . I know of no well-informed Washington observer who isn't convinced that if Roosevelt is elected he will drag us into war at the first opportunity and that if none presents itself he will make one. I know of none who is not aware that if that happens we shall have a war dictatorship with 'emergency powers' in the hands of men who have constantly sought ever-increasing 'emergency' powers at the expense of our political system—and who have never surrendered a single one. They have used them all to perpetuate themselves. I know of none who is not aware that participation in a major war costs so much that it will bankrupt the United States."

—General Hugh S. Johnson.

Promise vs. Performance

The 1932 Democratic platform strongly condemned the extravagance of the Republican farm program. At Atlanta, Georgia, on October 24, 1932, Franklin D. Roosevelt added this comment: "I am going to insist that we get more service for the farmers for less money." Total expenditures of the Department of Agriculture, however, have increased from $110,000,000 in 1932 to an estimated $1,607,000,000 in 1940, an increase of 1300 per cent. The total number of permanent employees of the Department of Agriculture increased from 16,544 in 1932 to 48,697 in 1939, or 195 per cent. Total pay rolls (obligations) for both permanent and temporary employees increased from $45,971,215 to $138,036,692, or 200 per cent. This excludes the 135,890 county and community agricultural conservation committeemen who administer the farm program locally.

Spending Failed

The real test of a recovery program is whether it has reduced unemployment and put people back to work. Despite the expenditure of more than $56 billion in seven years and of more than $21 billion for relief and recovery, the number of gainfully employed workers in the United States was more than two-and-a-half million less in 1939 than in 1929. There are today more than 10,000,000 unemployed. The average unemployment for the seven years of the Roosevelt Administration is 9,402,000, or 18 per cent of the total labor force.

Evicted

The New Deal has repossessed 91,195 farm homes from their owners. The mortgages were based on an average loan of $2,800.

Draft Call To List 1,200

tracted about 900,000 men, including motion picture celebrities, professional baseball players, professional and collegiate football stars, and citizens of prominence.

Mittelstaedt said the responsibility for registering rested on the individual, with severe penalties on those who attempt to evade the draft. He said the force of public opinion would keep draft evasion at a minimum.

The army stopped voluntary one-year enlistments last night but Mittelstaedt said men may enlist in the National Guard, with preference in the type of duty desired. Others may volunteer for induction, if between the ages of 18 and 26, and in good health.

Mittelstaedt said when registration is completed tonight, all registration cards will be turned over to the county clerk, who will deliver them to the local draft board to which they belong. The local boards will give each card a serial number beginning with 1.

After all the cards in the United States are numbered, the director said, the drawing in Washington will take place. A set of numbers from 1 to the highest number used by any local board in the country will be drawn.

"If your serial number is 86," Mittelstaedt said in citing a typical case, "and 86 is the first number drawn in Washington, then you and every man in the United States having 86 for a serial number are the first men on the list."

Names and serial numbers of the men registered will be posted by draft boards within a few days. Those whose number is chosen will receive a questionnaire, which will enable the draft board to determine if dependents, physical condition and other factors should permit deferred status.

Mittelstaedt said it is impossible to tell how many men will be called to service out of the 14 per cent of the population expected to register. He said the land and sea forces must first determine how many men are needed and how many can be trained, then the draft will be prorated among local districts on the basis of available first class men without dependents.

Each man registering will receive a small certificate with the signature of himself and the election official, to prove he has complied with the federal act.

Men failing to register today will be required to explain their negligence when they do appear. Any one away from home or out of the state may appear at any polling headquarters and their card will be forwarded to their home board.

"GOLD RUSH MAISIE" IS SHOWING TWO DAYS ON EMPIRE SCREEN

A new romantic team that squabbles more than it romances, makes its first appearance in "Gold Rush Maisie," opening a two day showing Wednesday at the Empire Theatre, with Ann Sothorn and Lee Bowman as its battling duo.

Third in the popular series dealing with the adventures of the stranded showgirl, "Gold Rush Maisie," presents Miss Sothorn in her familiar characterization, this time adrift in the midst of the Arizona desert when her old jalopy breaks down while she is en route to a cafe job. Bowman appears as Bill Anders, a handsome hermit and ranch owner who is happier the fewer people he sees. After he has given Maisie shelter for the night, she returns, much to his disgust, with a whole family of itinerant crop followers who are on the trail of a gold strike.

July 17-20, 1941, are the dates announced for the next California Rodeo at Salinas.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB HEAD RESIGNS AT ANNUAL LUNCHEON

asked all members to cooperate in club work for the remainder of the year.

In a very pleasing tribute to Mrs. Hoffman and her accomplishments during the short period of her term as president, Mrs. Robert Sinclair, on behalf of the members presented the retiring officer with a past president's emblem. Mrs. Hoffman very feelingly responded and again voiced her regret not only for having to resign her office, but also the circumstances which made it necessary to leave friends and acquaintances acquired in the community.

The afternoon's affair ended with the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and felicitations to Mrs. Hoffman mingled with regrets at her departure.

The delicious luncheon was prepared and served by Mrs. E. K. Fowler, past president and chairman of that section which caters to appetites and gains reward by knowing that she has accomplished a most pleasing purpose.

Reasons

for buying MAIL-WELL ENVELOPES

1. Deep Cut Shoulder Flaps—Shoulder flaps that allow room for more gumming surface which strengthens an envelope at its weakest point.
2. Handy to Open—The construction of the shoulder flap gives easy access to the letter opener.
3. Wider Gumming—Gumming that does not taper off at the ends, gives added strength where most needed and assures that "they stick."
4. All folds scored—Scoring before folding doubles the resistance power of an envelope.
5. Adequate Sealing Surface—Higher back insures that the gum on the deep flap will not come in contact with the envelope's contents.
6. Deep Cut Seams—Seams that strengthen the brace which is formed by Mail-Well envelopes when they are sealed and ready for mailing.
7. When Sealed a Brace is Formed—Sealing of Mail-Well envelopes complete the brace which is formed to resist the rough handling they receive in the mails.

These seven reasons above are sufficient to convince you that Mail-Well Envelopes are best suited to your needs, but we do not want you to decide just on our description of the envelopes for it is impossible to describe the "feel" of a Mail-Well Envelope or its quality appearance that lends so much dignity to the mail it carries. Let us show you samples so you can see for yourself. You will be under no obligation.

All England Hammered

ginio Gayda, the Fascist mouthpiece, reported in the Giornale D'- Italia that "new thrusts" are being prepared in North Africa and that the Italians already have pushed about 20 miles past the captured British base of Sidi Barrani in the Egyptian area. That would put them almost 100 miles into Egypt's western desert but still more than 200 miles from the British naval base of Alexandria, which guards the Suez canal.

The Egyptian offensive generally has been regarded as the southern spearhead of a two-pronged Axis offensive, with Germany and Italy simultaneously striking through the Balkans from the near eastern oil fields and squeeze the British navy in the eastern Mediterranean.

For days the surge of German troops into Rumania and the known readiness of both Italy and Germany for military operations in the Bulgaria and have caused Turkey to ousness in Yugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria and have caused Turkey to check on the lookout for aid
